

Final examination assessment (COMP7704)

Rationale

The final examination is designed to cover all learning objectives and to test both depth and breadth of students' knowledge relevant to the course.

Assessment details

The final examination consists of a series of short-answer problems on a wide range of topics covered in the course with reference to lectures, identified texts, tutorials and assignments. The final examination for COMP7704 also has a short-essay component, testing the student's broader understanding of the course. The examination paper is worth a total of 50 marks.

Delivery

A two hour final examination will be held during the final examination period. The examination paper is centrally organised. The examination is individual, closed-book and will contain multiple-choice, short-answer and short-essay questions. You may bring a battery-operated non-programmable calculator. Programmable calculators and other computing or communication devices are NOT permitted.
